The Mystery of IRMA
VEP A Penny
Dreadful

By Charles Ludlum

February 21 - March 4, 2018

A Message from the Artistic Director

---

Welcome to Main Street Players.

The Mystery of Irma Vep first appeared off-Broadway in 1984 and by 1991; it became the most produced play in the United States. This comic Victorian melodrama is filled with shades of Wuthering Heights, Alfred Hitchcock's Rebecca, and gothic horror.

Writer, Charles Ludlam, described his play as a "penny dreadful". This 19th-century genre was extremely popular with the British working class. Originally called "penny bloods", the booklets, typically 8 pages and sometimes longer, were sensational stories of adventure, murder and gothic horror. The one-penny weekly booklets included illustrations that reinforced the graphic nature of the stories. The most successful penny-blood series, Mysteries of London, written by G.W.M. Reynolds first appeared in 1844. His series lasted for over 12 years and included 4.5 million words.

Later many of the stories were based on true crimes ...especially murders. If none existed at the time.... the writers created them. The most popular of these is perhaps the story of Sweeney Todd. The 'Demon Barber' first appeared in a blood entitled String of Pearls, published in 1846. In fact, before the series conclusion, it was adapted for the stage thus setting the murderous barber on the road to world fame.

The name of the cheap booklets was changed to penny dreadful in the 1860s. Soon the stories focused on the pursuers and not the murders. In 1865, a 70 part penny dreadful, The Boy Detective, or The Crimes of London appeared.

By the 1890s, the popularity of the penny dreadful began to decline. Over time they evolved into British comic magazines.

Enjoy the show.
